Detroit Regional Partnership

Sarah Gregory
Director of Talent Solutions

Sarah Gregory is Director of Talent Solutions for the Detroit Regional Partnership, a leading economic development nonprofit for the 11-county Detroit Region. Gregory oversees programming that provides comprehensive regional workforce data, customized talent planning, partner connections and other talent concierge services to prospective companies looking to locate or expand in the Detroit Region. She also consults with existing and emerging industries to nurture a regional talent strategy based on current and future workforce needs. Her responsibilities include helping foster a more streamlined and inclusive network of universities, community colleges and other talent development and placement agencies to better connect residents with jobs for all skill levels.

Gregory previously worked as director of talent development at the Workforce Intelligence Network (WIN), a Southeast Michigan organization specializing in developing data-informed, highly collaborative workforce solutions. In that role, she managed a portfolio of talent pipeline and career pathway development programs supporting a variety of industries, including health care, transportation, and manufacturing. Prior to her role at WIN, Gregory served as a quality control coordinator at Michigan Works! where she developed a deep understanding of Michigan's workforce development programming and the policy at all levels of government that guide those operations.
